

Classical Guitarists Do Rock

Mark Starlin - October 11, 2007

What do you think? Email me.

Archive

Anyone who thinks classical guitarists can't rock needs to check out Jonathan Adams of Montana Skies. Montana Skies is duo consisting of classical guitarist Jonathan and his wife Jennifer — who also rocks hard on the electric and acoustic cello. Don't believe it? Check out this High Res video of House Of The Rising Sun:

Playing an acoustic, Jonathan starts out in a classical/fingerstyle mode. As the song progresses, they both use a looping pedal to lay down a backing guitar and bass track. Later Jonathan cuts loose with some rocking distorted lead, including some Van Halen style tapping. Then he and Jennifer pull off some harmonized leads. They wrap it up with a little Devil Went Down To Georgia. These two are obscenely talented. Check them out.

Montana Skies

Copyright ©1998-2008 Mark Starlin

about

contact

Better Guitar Magazine

http://www.betterguitar.com/blog/oct_11_07.html